

EES: 2024: Future plans for future generations

As we begin preparing for the future redevelopment of our London premises, we want to ensure that we're using every opportunity to support the next generation of scholars. We want to run a series of internships in our collections to help us manage their packing and relocation. By doing this with a bigger team, we can ensure that much of our collection is made available during the redevelopment both online and via recall from off-site storage.

We need your help to accomplish this. This mammoth task cannot be completed by our current team alone, so we want to give early career scholars the opportunity to gain on-the-job training and skills as well as the chance to play an essential role in our future plans.

Those generously donating £100 or more toward the Appeal will receive exclusive invitations to our online Intern 'meet & greet' sessions where the interns will answer questions about the items they have worked on and tell us more about their experience of working with the EES collections. This might be the last chance to see some of our collections before they are packaged and sent off-site during the redevelopment.

Please help us to lay the foundations for future access to our collections, thank you.
